Challenges to Collecting Data

It remains a challenge to collect and analyze human trafficking data for a variety of reasons. Laws that protect survivor/client confidentiality and privileged information, including the federal Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPPA), require providers to protect the confidentiality of survivor information. A lack of shared definitions and uniform data collection methods among service providers, police jurisdictions, and county departments also make the process of collecting data challenging. Numbers will be duplicative, as some survivors may have been served by multiple agencies, and numbers will vary throughout the report. Additionally, potential cases of human trafficking are often investigated and prosecuted under non-human trafficking related charges, such as pimping, pandering and prostitution, rather than Penal Code 236.1. Calls to the police rarely come in as a human trafficking crime. Because human trafficking is an under reported crime, these numbers only reflect those who were identified and assisted.

County of Santa Clara Human Trafficking Data Report

Other factors to consider include:

- Laws that define human trafficking vary internationally, nationally and state to state.
- Agency mandates, funding, roles, and responsibilities dictate who is served and counted as a human trafficking victim, as well as what data is collected.

Highlights from the Report

While the data has limitations, consistent themes emerged across the agencies:

- More sex trafficking survivors were identified than labor trafficking survivors.
- Survivors of human trafficking were overwhelmingly women.
- The majority of human trafficking survivors served were US citizens.
- Many CSEC victims identified were not from Santa Clara County and providers incurred transportation costs associated with their return home.
- The majority of foreign-born victims were from Mexico.
- Domestic servitude was the most common form of labor trafficking.
- There appears to be a gap in reporting and responding to child labor trafficking cases.
- Commercially sexually exploited youth continue to need support and resources after the age of 18 (transitional age youth).

Next Steps

1. Establish standardized templates with common working definitions for collecting data among like agencies (e.g. Victim Service Providers, County Departments, and Law Enforcement Agencies).
2. Identify the appropriate County Department to compile data.
3. Create a County of Santa Clara annual human trafficking data report.

South Bay Coalition to End Human Trafficking

Utilizing a victim-centered approach, the South Bay Coalition to End Human Trafficking's (The Coalition) mission is to ensure the protection of victims, the prosecution of offenders, and the prevention of human trafficking and slavery through an effective coordinated partnership. The Coalition upholds a victim-centered approach in coordinating resources and strengthening local capacity to address human trafficking. The Coalition has been successful in responding to human trafficking, providing professional training and education, and building trust between non-governmental organizations, government agencies, and community members to address human trafficking in the South Bay.

Coalition partners who contributed data to this report include Asian Americans for Community Involvement (AACI), Community Solutions, Katharine and George Alexander Community Law Center, Next Door Solutions to End Domestic Violence, and the YWCA of Silicon Valley.

The Coalition has provided services to 185 unduplicated survivors between 2003 and 2014, with 99 commercial sex trafficking, 64 forced labor, and 22 combined sex and labor trafficking cases. CSEC Service Response Team

The CSEC Service Response Team Pilot Project, managed by Community Solutions between February 2014 and March 2015, provided in-person response and comprehensive supportive services to commercially sexually exploited children (CSEC). Using a victim-centered, trauma-informed and collaborative approach, this team served 59 youth who were confirmed CSEC or at high-risk. Of the 59 youth, 38 were confirmed, while 21 were considered at high-risk because of unsafe sexual behaviors or close contact with another CSEC. The Service Team measured success by providing services in three phases (crisis, stabilization, and intermediate) while tracking the survivor’s movement throughout each phase. The CSEC advocate also provided support to legal guardians through peer counseling and resources as needed, and also participated in Multi-Disciplinary Team (MDT) meetings.

Below is a breakdown of demographic information for the youth served.

Legal Advocates for Children & Youth (LACY)

Legal Advocates for Children & Youth (LACY) is a nonprofit program of the Law Foundation of Silicon Valley. Since 1990, it has provided free legal help to our community’s children and youth, advancing their legal rights and empowering them to lead healthy and productive lives. In September 2014, LACY began receiving Measure A funding to provide legal and social work services to children and youth up to age 21 who have been, are suspected of being, or are at high risk of being commercially sexually exploited. It launched its CSEC Project the same month.

Between September 2014 and March 2015, LACY gathered information about 40 youth who had either been referred to its CSEC Project or were existing clients flagged as actual or suspected CSEC. The overwhelming majority were female (39) and English speakers (39). Out of the 40 youth, 93% were involved with the child welfare or foster care system. The following data reflect demographic characteristics of the 40 youth.

District Attorney's Office

The District Attorney's Office prosecutes human trafficking crimes that occur in Santa Clara County. Recognizing that very few police agencies have the resources to investigate human trafficking full time, District Attorney Jeff Rosen, Sheriff Laurie Smith and Supervisor Cindy Chavez created the L.E.I.H.T. (Law Enforcement to Investigate Human Trafficking) Task Force in August 2014.

Funded by the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors, the L.E.I.H.T. Task Force consists of a Deputy District Attorney, a DA Investigator, a Sheriff's Sergeant, and two Sheriff's Detectives. The FBI is also represented on the Task Force. The primary objectives of the Task Force are to educate, investigate and incarcerate. Since the inception of the L.E.I.H.T. Task Force, and as a result of increased training across the County, the District Attorney's Office has experienced a marked increase in the number of human trafficking prosecutions.

The District Attorney's Office compiled human trafficking data from 2006 to July 2015. In order to understand and interpret the data accurately, several definitions and points need to be addressed.

- A "case" is defined as a set of all charges against all defendants that are handled by the court as a single matter. For example, a case with one defendant with multiple charges is one case. Similarly, a case with three defendants is still recorded as one case. If at least one of the charges alleged is a human trafficking charge, it was counted as a human trafficking case, regardless of how many other human trafficking or non-human trafficking charges were alleged.
- A "case filed" means the District Attorney's Office decided to file charges in that matter. For a case to be prosecuted, it must first be investigated by a law enforcement agency and then referred to the District Attorney's Office for the filing of charges. This data does not capture human trafficking referrals where no charges or non-human trafficking charges were filed.
- When Proposition 35 passed in 2012, California voters changed the definition of "human trafficking of a minor." After 2012, "deprivation of liberty" was no longer required to prove the trafficking of a minor. This data counts as "human trafficking cases" those matters that would have been prosecuted as human trafficking had the conduct occurred after the passage of Proposition 35.
- A "case filed" can include multiple defendants, multiple charges and multiple victims. For example, the District Attorney's Office filed 59 human trafficking cases involving minors between 1/1/2006 and 7/29/15. This does not mean there were only 59 minor human trafficking victims in that time period since each case could involve one or multiple victims. Similarly, one human trafficking victim could have been victimized multiple times, in different cases, by different defendants.
